Meeting the challenges of Agriculture and Forestry with Commissioner Bob Odom

Eradicating the boll weevil, cotton's century-old curse in Louisiana, is reshaping the landscape of the state's most valuable crop.

"Cotton has become something of a victim of its own success. Our triumph here and across the South over the boll weevil leaves us with a mixed outlook for the future," said Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Bob Odom.

"The amount of cotton acreage in the South has tripled in the last ten years. The most often told story is that of Georgia. Before eradication there were 300,000 acres of cotton grown in the state. Today they are growing 1.3 million acres. The same story is playing itself out in other states where the boll weevil is rapidly becoming nothing more than a bad memory.

"Add the U.S. picture to world surpluses and the planet is awash in cotton. As a result prices have plunged," Odom said.

"Locally, boll weevil numbers are approaching zero in most places. This has led to a huge decrease in the need for various weevil-control chemicals and gins are laboring to keep pace with exploding acreage.

"In Louisiana alone acreage will approach 900,000 acres this year, up from 600,000 acres three years ago. We don't have the ginning capacity to take care of that much cotton.

"In many areas, particularly along the Red River south of Natchitoches, acreage has doubled. There cotton will be stored in modules through next year before the available gins will be able to get to it," Odom said. "Some gins are attempting to add ginning capacity, but that's not an overnight thing. It's going to be tough to meet the demand."

Recent prices for cotton have been on the order of 37-cents-a-pound. Historically, cotton goes for around 60-cents-a-pound. Many farmers say the only thing that keeps them in cotton this year is the government subsidy program. That program will pay about 52-cents-a-pound for cotton if the market price stays below 52 cents. Recent market forces indicate that the price will stay well below the 52-cent level.

Aerial application businesses are the most threatened by the eradication program.

"Before eradication, aerial applicators were putting 12 to 15 applications of pesticides out in a typical year on every acre of cotton in the state. That has been reduced to three to four applications. Environmentally, that's a very good thing, but in raw numbers that's a 75 percent drop in the aerial application business," Odom said.

On the plus side for aerial applicators the acreage increase will mean added business in the application of growth regulators. Regulators are a management tool that reduces the height of the cotton, allows fruiting over a shorter period of time, and reduces boll rot.

"But the net effect is still a big drop in aerial applications," he said. "And, with reduced chemical sales, business is off at local supply companies."

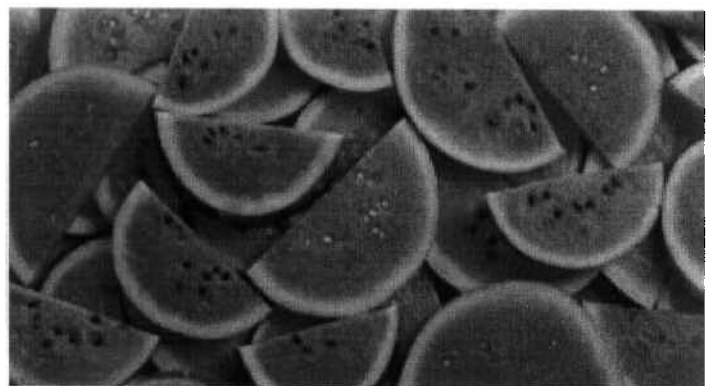

For the future, many cotton farmers who apply pesticides by ground rigs are looking at the $100,000 cost of a new rig as an expense they can avoid given the big cut in pesticide use.

"Overall, the cost of growing an acre of cotton, pre-eradication, was about $450 an acre. Now it's something in the neighborhood of $250 an acre.

"About the only thing that is going to bail out cotton prices this year is a huge shortfall in China. That's possible as reports from the world's largest cotton producer are that cotton there is under severe weather stress.

"If Chinese yield does indeed suffer a serious setback, and they become a net importer, we may see the price rebound somewhat. But unless that happens, worldwide we are drowning in cotton right now," Odom said.

U.S. Senator Mary Landrieu, D-La, listens to questions and comments from dairy farmers at a recent Louisiana Farm Bureau meeting. Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Bob Odom invited Landrieu, who is now taking lead in the fight for a Southern Dairy Compact in Congress, to speak to dairy farmers and take their concerns back to Washington, D.C.

Landrieu takes lead in fight for Southern Dairy Compact Senator tells farmers to rally together behind dairy producers

Sen. Mary Landrieu said southern dairy farmers are going to have a battle on their hands to get the Southern Dairy Compact passed through Congress this year, and she's taking the lead to ensure her Senate colleagues understand the importance of the issue.

Landrieu told more than 400 farmers attending a general session of the 79th Annual Louisiana Farm Bureau Convention in New Orleans that as the Democratic lead on the legislation, she is willing to leverage her "political chits," or clout, to help get the compact passed.

"We've put together about 40 co-sponsors, and we're going to try a new approach," Landrieu said. "It's going to take everybody's effort but I'm happy to champion it for you. And, I know we're going to get good support from our delegation in the House."

Landrieu is lining up votes, but told the farmers she doesn't want to "over promise" anything after the previous attempt to pass a Southern compact came to a disappointing conclusion.

"This has been very controversial, and last year we worked very hard and fell a few votes short," she said.

"Unfortunately there is some opposition and it's strong opposition by a vocal minority who represent interests of large processors out of other parts of the country. So, we're going to have a battle on our hands, and the dairy farmers are going to need all your help in this lobbying effort."

Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Bob Odom is actively involved in the States Ratification Committee for the Southern Dairy Compact, and has been pushing for approval of a Southern Dairy Compact for years.

Odom, like many farmers, sees the compact as the only way to return profitability to dairy farming.

"Just in the last several years we've lost 150 dairy farmers in this state," Odom noted. "If we don't get a Southern Dairy Compact soon, we're not going to have any left."

In the last 15 years, Louisiana has gone from more than 1,000 dairy farms to about 430 today.

Some opponents say dairy compacts drive prices up for consumers, but both Odom and Landrieu disagree saying compacts help to stimulate the economies of rural communities and have minimal impact on retail milk prices. They cited the Northeast Dairy Compact as an example.

"There is study after study showing that it's only been a few percentage points at the retail level, but what happens is it gives a steady price to milk products and guarantees fresh milk to a region," Landrieu explained.

"Just like when other sectors get in trouble and we all sort of rally together, the dairy farmers are going to need your help. And, I need you to help me by contacting senators and representatives," she urged the audience.

Louisiana Watermelons

Watermelon is low in sodium and fat. Watermelon is cholesterol-free and a good source of vitamins A and C, plus it's a great way to replenish body fluids lost during exercise because it's 92% water. An average two-cup serving of watermelon is just 90 calories.

Old Fashioned Pickled Watermelon Rinds

*2 quarts prepared watermelon rind
pickling lime
water
1 quart white or cider vinegar
*5 cups sugar
1 tablespoon pickling spices
1 tablespoon cloves
1 tablespoon whole allspice
1 large cinnamon stick, broken into pieces

Prepare rind by removing green outer rind and red flesh; cut into 1-inch pieces. Combine pickling lime and water in a ratio of 2 tablespoons lime to each quart water and pour over prepared watermelon rind. Make enough to cover all the rind. Soak at least 8 hours, but preferably overnight, stirring the mixture from time to time during the soaking.

Drain off lime water. Rinse rind carefully under running water several times to remove all of the lime. Drain rind pieces on a kitchen towel.

Make a syrup of vinegar, 1 cup water and sugar in a large stainless steel or enamel saucepan. Tie spices together in cheesecloth or muslin and add to the syrup. Simmer mixture until all sugar is dissolved. Taste carefully (it is quite hot) and add more sugar or vinegar to taste. Add watermelon rind and boil until transparent and syrup is thick. Remove spice bag.

Put rind and syrup into hot jars, seal and process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes.

Quick and Easy Watermelon Pie

1 can sweetened condensed milk
4 ounce container refrigerated non-dairy topping, thawed
1/4 cup lime juice

*2 cups watermelon balls

1 9 in. graham cracker crust

Fold together milk and topping. Add lime juice. Fold in watermelon balls, reserving about 5 balls for garnish. Pour into graham cracker crust. Place remaining, watermelon balls on pie to garnish. Chill for 2 more hours before serving.

South-of-the-Border

Watermelon Sweet Onion Salsa

*2 cups chopped watermelon

3/4 cup chopped sweet onion

3/4 cup canned black beans, rinsed and drained

1/4 cup chopped seeded jalapeno chillies

1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro

1 large clove garlic, finely chopped

*1 tablespoon brown sugar

1/2 teaspoon salt

Stir together all ingredients in bowl. Refrigerate, covered at least 1 hour to blend flavors. Stir before serving.

Watermelon Vinaigrette

2 tablespoons currant jelly

*1/4 cup pureed watermelon

2 tablespoons white wine vinegar

1/4 teaspoon garlic pepper

1 teaspoon vegetable oil

In small saucepan, heat jelly just until melted; cool. Add remaining ingredients; stir until blended. Store in refrigerator; shake well before using.

Watermelon Ham Wraps

1 tablespoon chive and onion spreadable cream cheese

1 large, burrito size low fat tortilla

1 ounce thinly sliced low-fat ham

1 lettuce leaf

*1 seeded watermelon spear, about 1/2" thick, 1" wide and 9" long

Spread cream cheese on tortilla covering to edges. Place ham across center of tortilla; top with lettuce making sure edges to be rolled are not covered. Place watermelon spear on lettuce just off center. Roll tortilla over watermelon spear; continue rolling, tucking in ham and lettuce. Cream cheese will help tortilla stay rolled. Fasten with wooden pick if needed.

Watermelon Ice

*3 cups watermelon juice

*1/3 cups granulated sugar

1/4 cup lime juice

In large shallow pan, stir all ingredients together until sugar is dissolved; place pan in freezer. Stir watermelon mixture every 20 minutes until frozen, about 2 hours. Cover; store in freezer. To serve, break mixture up with fork.
